

A Century Old

Michael E. Stone

Old, shrivelled now, vanquished only
by torn leaves fluttering from her body's calendar.

A century of not seeing,
of pain
lovingly exacted
from herself, from us.

Mother, hard, loving.